Objectives

- 1. Stress Reduction: Meditation helps calm the mind and body by slowing down the heart rate and regulating breathing. This can significantly reduce stress levels and the associated physical and emotional symptoms.
- 2. Anxiety Management: By teaching individuals to focus on the present moment, meditation can help manage anxiety and prevent it from spiraling out of control. It can also help identify and challenge anxious thoughts.
- 3. Mood Enhancement: Regular meditation practice can help boost mood and reduce symptoms of depression. It can increase feelings of happiness, contentment, and overall well-being.
- 4. Improved Sleep Quality: Meditation can help individuals relax and unwind before sleep, leading to better sleep quality and reduced insomnia.
- 5. Increased Self-Awareness: Meditation can help individuals become more aware of their thoughts, emotions, and bodily sensations. This self-awareness can lead to greater self-understanding and acceptance.
- 6. Enhanced Emotional Regulation: Meditation can help individuals develop greater control over their emotions, allowing them to respond to situations more calmly and effectively.
- 7. Improved Focus and Concentration: By training the mind to focus on a single point, meditation can improve concentration and attention span, which can be beneficial in both work and personal life.
- 8. Cultivation of Compassion: Certain types of meditation, such as loving-kindness meditation, can help cultivate feelings of compassion and empathy for oneself and others.

Guest lecture on Meditation for Mental Health

Outcomes

- 1. Reduce stress and anxiety: By calming the mind and body, meditation can help to reduce the physiological and psychological responses to stress. This can be particularly beneficial for individuals with anxiety disorders.
- 2. Alleviate depression: Studies have shown that mindfulness-based meditation practices can help to reduce symptoms of depression, such as sadness, hopelessness, and loss of interest.
- 3. Improve sleep quality: By promoting relaxation and reducing racing thoughts, meditation can help individuals fall asleep more easily and sleep more soundly.
- 4. Increase emotional regulation: Meditation can help individuals to become more aware of their emotions and develop skills for managing them more effectively.
- 5. Enhance self-awareness: By focusing on the present moment, meditation can increase self-awareness and help individuals to understand their thoughts, feelings, and behaviors more deeply.
- 6. Meditation is not a cure-all: While meditation can be a valuable tool for improving mental health, it is not a substitute for professional treatment.
- 7. Consistency is key: The benefits of meditation are often most pronounced with regular practice.
- 8. Finding the right type of meditation: Different types of meditation may be more effective for different individuals. If you are considering using meditation to improve your mental health, it is recommended that you consult with a mental health professional to discuss whether it is right for you and to learn more about different meditation techniques.

Waste Management

Introduction

The college will implement the "solid, liquid and e-waste principle" in the delivery of its waste management system. College will apply a waste handling process, to reduce, reuse and recycle waste products. Solid / liquid waste generated in the campus shall be managed and handled in accordance with compliance criteria and procedure laid down in Municipal Solid Wastes (Management Handling) Rules There is a legal requirement for all who produce, keep or dispose hazardous /radioactive / chemical waste of any type to comply with the various regulations under national and international environment protection legislation.

Objectives:

- To confirm that waste management is performed in accordance with all waste legislative requirements, including the duty of caring and planning for future legislative changes and to mitigate their effects.
- To provide clearly defined roles and work to facilitate reduce, reuse and recycle the disposal wastes in a cost-effective manner.
- To endorse environmental awareness in order to increase and inspire waste minimization, reuse and recycling.
- To ensure the safe handling and storage of wastes on college campus.
- To maintain campus with minimum plastic use.
- To promote holistic approach of waste management in the campus.

e Management Methods:

Waste Management:

- Every day all the academic buildings and other surrounding area in the campus are cleaned by Maintenance department.
- Two bins system is followed for waste collection one for biodegradable and one for non-biodegradable.
- Biodegradable waste is transformed into vermicomposting and is used in organic farming.
- Non-biodegradable waste is further segregated and disposed through Gram panchayat's garbage vehicle on a routine basis

Liquid Waste Management

- Liquid waste from the points of generation like to the hostel, canteen and toilet etc.. is let out as effluent into a proper drainage facility and avoid stagnation.
- Liquid waste from chemistry laboratory is channeled through pipes into soak pits.

E-Waste Management

- Optimum use of all electronic equipment's through repair.
- Unused and non-repairable waste is disposed by the PRES.

Flammable waste Examples:

- Phenols: Phenol or phenol mixtures, phenol-chloroform mixtures and phenol-acid mixtures.
- Halogenates: chloroform, 1, 1, 1-trichloroethane, methylene chloride etc. Corrosives: non-halogenated solvent-acid mixtures, non-halogenated organic acids such as acetic acid, trichloroacetate, acetic anhydride.
- Non-halogenates: acetone, toluene, acetonitrile, ethyl acetate, heptane, hexane, alcohol with less than 20% water.
- Acids: hydrochloric acid, sulphuric acid, nitric acid, chromic acid, hydrofluoric acid. Inorganic/acid mixtures: iron (III) chloride, aluminium trichloride, mercury compounds dissolved in acid, other inorganic compounds dissolved in acid.
- Corrosive waste - Alkali Examples: hydroxides, phosphates, ammonia. Alkali mixtures: compounds dissolved in hydroxides, phosphates, ammonia.
- Reactive waste Examples: air and water sensitive materials such as Grignard reagent, alkaline metals, reactive halides.

Waste oxidizers Examples:

- all nitrates, potassium dichromate, metal peroxides such as chromium dioxide.
- Inorganic wastes: Heavy metal compounds and solutions such as those of mercury, lead, copper and zinc (except those dissolved in acid), other inorganic compounds not covered by another category.

Hazardous waste:

- Other Examples: All waste in this category must be segregated. It includes radioactive waste, bio hazardous waste, highly hazardous waste, and explosive waste or surplus chemicals. Explosive or other highly hazardous materials: peroxide formers such as aged ether, di and tri - nitro compounds, old flares, azides. These materials require special disposal.

Toxic:

- The toxic 'characteristic' is where the regulations start to get into listing specific chemicals. To determine whether a chemical waste exhibits the toxic characteristic, it is necessary to check the federal toxic list, known as the 'D' list. The concentration listed next to the chemical names below refers to a very specialized analytical method known as the TCLP test (the Toxic Characteristic Leachate Procedure).
- The TCLP test is designed to simulate the concentration of contaminant that would leach out of the material if it were in a landfill under acid rain conditions. EHS can provide TCLP analysis if necessary. However, in most cases the right thing to do is to collect wastes with any concentration of the chemicals listed below.

Strategies for chemical waste management

Objective to improve the sustainability inside the campus and to reduce the resource utilization. Initiative taken by CSIR-IITP towards the proper disposal of waste.

Green bin waste: paper, filter paper, tissue paper

Blue bin: plastic bottles, used paraffin.

Red bin: Gloves, syringes, Aluminium foil, broken glass.

White bin: for solid chemical waste

Before the disposal of solid chemical waste, we can follow the following strategies

a) To reduce waste

One can use less toxic reagents, substituting for products with lower toxicity. In this context, it is possible to consider the replacement of products such as benzene, used as a solvent, with hexane or xylene, halogenated solvents with non-halogenated solvents. Replacement is not always possible because some substitutes do not always produce fully satisfactory results, or are toxic or too expensive. Thus, it is necessary to evaluate if the replacement material is suitable and delivers acceptable results.

b) Reuse and Recycle

Reuse and recycle processes when possible in a new way, or treat otherwise reuse it in the same way, or in another type of activity. Some examples of recycling are:

- o Distillation of used solvents
- o The glassware can be initially washed with used solvents in cleaning processes;
- o Purchase only compressed gas cylinders from manufacturers that accept the return of empty or partially used ones;
- o In pesticide studies, it is advisable to establish the practice of returning any unused material to the research sponsor;
- o Avoid the contamination of fuel with solvents or heavy metals;
- o Share chemical agents among the various university units;

If the above procedures are not suitable for specific situations to minimize waste, an alternative may be the final chemical treatment of the generated hazardous waste. The techniques routinely used in reducing chemical waste are: neutralization, precipitation, oxidation, reduction and distillation
